2.3 Made-up measures

The first paragraph of a made-up page begins here and carries on over a second line of words that mean nothing, and ends on a third.

A second paragraph follows after a gap, as most do, and has two lines.

A third is only set in from the line before it, as some books set them.

Downloaded from a made-up journal, for testing only

The second page has one paragraph of its own, over two lines.

A third page has a made-up figure in the middle of it, with labels scattered around a drawing, which are not read along with the text around them.

After the figure the text carries on as it did before it, and the footer at the bottom of the page is not read either.
